NICK ROSSITER APPOINTED CEO DESIGNATE OF REGISTRY TRUST

The board of debt judgment registrar Registry Trust has designated Nick Rossiter its new chief executive with effect from July this year.

Registry Trust is the non-profit company which registers judgments, orders and fines throughout the British Isles and makes them available to the general public and – through credit reference agencies – to the credit world.

Nick has worked with Registry Trust for 13 years, initially as operational manager and more recently as an executive director and chief operating officer. Last year he was appointed deputy ceo.

He will take over from outgoing ceo Jon Hale, who retires on June 30 after 18 years as chief executive and 32 years with the Trust.

Chairman Malcolm Hurlston CBE said: "Nick Rossiter has gained the deep regard of our partners and staff. Jon Hale is confident that his unique legacy is safe in Nick's hands as well as the future developments of our mission.

"The board was unanimous this week in its approval of my recommendation that Nick become chief executive designate with immediate effect.

"We are now in the process of selecting a new senior executive capable of joining Nick on the board of the Trust."

Nick Rossiter joined Registry Trust after working in credit reference agencies Experian and Callcredit, and the Land Registry. Both Experian and Callcredit are members of the Trust, which is a mission led company limited by guarantee.

He is married with one child and lives in Nottingham.

Notes for editors

Registry Trust is a non-profit company established in 1985 in order to operate what was at the time the Registry of County Court Judgments on behalf of the Department of Constitutional Affairs. It maintains public records of judgment and decree information for most jurisdictions in the British Isles and Ireland. These records are an important factor in avoiding debt and in supporting responsible lending decisions, which in turn underpin a modern and stable economy.
